Subject: C'mon... why grow slowly?

There's a long-standing fallacy that infects both the "common folk" as well as business owners that goes something like this:

"Forget about GET RICH QUICK. The only trustworthy path to wealth is to do so slowly over time."

I have a one word response that boils down to two letters: BS

What possible benefit can anyone discern from the depressing notion that the path to wealth should take years, perhaps even decades?

In reality, fortune favors the BOLD who ACT with DECISIVENESS and CLARITY.

This has always been the case and I firmly believe it will always be so. And I'm not alone.

A growing number of entrepreneurs are now embracing a concept known as “Growth Hacking” – fast, quick, laser-focused actions that pinpoint opportunities to be exploited at light speed. While the term itself seems to have emerged from high tech industries such as Cloud Computing or Software As A Service (SAAS), more and more these strategies are being used by enterprises ranging from architects to zookeepers.

And they are experiencing astonishing results in record time.

If you’d prefer to go for the brass ring NOW as opposed to patiently waiting for that massive bank balance to graciously appear at some far off point in the future, then I suggest you mark your calendar NOW for Wednesday, July 1st from 11AM to 3PM Eastern time...

Because on that date I’ll be joined by my good friend Dave Dee and together we’ll dive deep into this concept of “growth hacking” to reveal exactly how you can put these little known strategies, systems, and templates to generate RAPID, MASSIVE GROWTH in your business.

See you there.

Best,

Dan Kennedy, GKIC

P.S. [Update] I've just been informed after dashing off this quick note that the tech team has made it possible for you to save your spot for this "Growth Hacking" training. They also let me know that it WILL fill up so you'd be best served by nailing yours down by clicking here now.
